

“I can always tell when someone’s been reading
my copy of The Chronicle.”

— Manuel N. Gómez
Vice chancellor of student affairs
University of California at Irvine

Subscribers like Manuel N. Gómez are accustomed to cutting up their copies of The Chronicle to save or pass on articles to colleagues.

Why risk your job by cutting up the boss’s copy? There’s a safer way to guarantee yourself complete coverage of everything that’s happening in academe—get your own copy to read and cut up.
